Dear Mr. Tsukamoto:

On behalf of the Embassy of the People's Republic of China in Japan, I would like to extend my warm congratulations to the upcoming “33rd Clean Coal Day International Symposium (2024)” and “2024 Stable Resource Supply and Decarbonization Forum”, and express my sincere respect for the efforts made by the organizers to promote the development of global clean energy, ensure stable resource supply, and accelerate the decarbonization process.

Addressing climate change and ensuring energy security are common challenges faced by the world. This symposium and forum, focusing on energy policy updates and technological research and development in energy transition, will provide a valuable platform for policymakers, experts, scholars, and entrepreneurs in the global energy sector to exchange ideas, share experience, and explore cooperation. It is of great significance for promoting the sustainable utilization of coal resources and advancing the optimization and upgrading of the global energy structure.

Embassy of the People's Republic of China in Japan

As the world's largest producer and consumer of coal, China has been committed to promoting the research, development, and application of clean and efficient coal utilization technologies. We are willing to work with all other countries to strengthen exchanges and cooperation in clean coal technology, stable resource supply and decarbonization, and jointly promote the development of global clean energy, so as to make positive contributions to achieving green and low-carbon development goals.

I sincerely wish the "33rd Clean Coal Day International Symposium (2024)" and the "2024 Stable Resource Supply and Decarbonization Forum" a complete success, injecting new impetus into the global energy sector to promote development and cooperation.
